Holidays fill a human need for celebration, for remembrance, and for tradition. A part of that tradition is captured in the stories we hear, over and over, as we celebrate the days that give shape to our year. In the long storytelling tradition of Jewish people, Theodore Bikel narrates the story of Mendel the Peddler; Feivel, the wealthy lumber merchant; and the wise Rabbi Yonah, who resolves, with great wisdom, the Hanukkah dispute that arises between them. Bikel reads IN THE MONTH OF KISLEV in wonderfully authentic voices while lively music plays and children laugh. The extended author's note, read to the same lively music, informs the uninitiated listener about the history and customs of Hanukkah. T.B. (c) AudioFile, Portland, Maine

The wisdom that eludes modern courts

By mrswalnut

I love this story. I use it in late November-early December in my primary music classes when we sing songs from various winter celebrations. My students are wholly unfamiliar with Judaism, and I'm very careful not to proselytize, but they are intrigued by the menorah, the imagined smell of latkes, and the dreidl game. The illustrations of this book give a sense of candlelight in the darkness.

In the Month of Kislev

By Nancy W. Wiltz

I loved this story and I highly recommend it. While it does deal with the Jewish holiday of Hannakah, it also is a much more meaningful story about kindness to others.
