MISSING WOMEN, MISSING NEWS: COVERING CRISIS IN VANCOUVER'S DOWNTOWN EASTSIDE (FERNWOOD BASICS) BY DAVID HUGILL PDF

The arrest and trial of Robert Pickton—a man charged with murdering 26 prostitutes in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside—is at the center of this study of the behavior of police officers and news reporters when a crime involves poor or marginalized victims. The analysis asks What made it possible for so many women to simply disappear from a densely populated urban neighborhood without provoking an aggressive response by the state? For answers, the book compares the Vancouver murders to the disappearance of a single teenager in Toronto—a tragic but isolated incident—that marshaled vigorous police work and extensive media coverage. Pointing to the broad social forces that drove this unequal treatment, the discussion calls for changes in the way the media covers police work.

An important book

By Herschel K.

This is a very clear, concise, and well-researched analysis of the Robert Pickton trial (Canada) and the media frenzy surrounding it. It offers a smart, thoughtful, and critical response to those who wish to see the violence against poor and Aboriginal women in Vancouver as the work of one psycho-killer. The author offers a damning critique of the interlocking network of police, the provincial government, the media and the increasing dangers of neoliberal trajectories that produced an easy-to-digest understanding of the disappearance and murder of at least 60 women. A great book for anyone interested in:

- critically thinking about the news
- the relationship between media, law, and ideology
- anti-colonial critiques of law
- sex-work laws in Canada
- representations of sex-workers

I use it in a course I teach on 'Media Representations of the Urban' but it is certainly not just for students!
